

AG. EXTENSION MEETING SET FOR JANUARY 9

Re - Districting Of County Into Five Areas Will Be Important Business.

The annual meeting of the Adams County Agricultural Extension association will be held at the court house here, Wednesday, January 9, R. E. Underwood, farm agent, announced today. The detailed program for the occasion has not yet been worked out, but interesting sessions for both men and women are being planned by Mr. Underwood and Miss Helen Matheis, home economics extension specialist.

Re-district County

One of the important items of business to come before the extension association is the re-districting of the county into five areas instead of thirteen communities as at present, Mr. Underwood said. Two local leaders will be named to have charge of the activities in each district. By this plan, Mr. Underwood said he hopes to secure closer cooperation among the members of the association, and at the same time put into action farm projects which otherwise might not have been possible.

The five "key towns" of the new districts will be Arendtsville, York Springs, Fairfield, Gettysburg and McSherrystown. The townships included in each of the five districts follow:

Five Districts

Arendtsville: Franklin, Butler and Menallen.

York Springs: Tyrone, Huntingdon, Latimore, Reading and Hamilton.

Fairfield: Hamiltonban, Highland, Liberty and Freedom.

Gettysburg: Cumberland, Mt. Joy, Mt. Pleasant and Straban.

McSherrystown: Germany, Union, Conewago, Oxford and Berwick.

The members of the extension association will be asked to vote on the re-districting, after discussing the merits of the proposition.

LACERATES HER THUMB WITH AXE

While helping to butcher, Mrs. Roy Metz, Iron Springs, lacerated her right thumb today with an axe with which she intended to cut spare ribs. She was brought to the Warner hospital where several stitches were used to close the wound, after which she was discharged as a patient.

MRS. MILLER IS BURIED MONDAY

Funeral services for Mrs. Harriet E. Miller, widow of Captain Charles G. Miller, who died last Friday evening at her home on York street, were held Monday. Following brief services at the home, further services were held at Salem United Brethren church, the Rev. F. L. Stine officiating, assisted by the Rev. W. R. Glenn, of Baltimore, a former United Brethren pastor here. Interment was in the cemetery adjoining the church.

Pallbearers were S. C. Spangler, J. Price Oyley, Oscar C. Lupp, Reuben Culp, Edward Trostle and Emmert Kime.

YOUTH SENT TO REFORMATORY

Earl Beattie, 17, of Shiremans-town, who confessed, police said, to breaking into the Gettysburg high school building and to numerous thefts elsewhere, was sentenced to the Huntingdon reformatory, at York, Monday. He had entered pleas of guilty to six charges of felonious entry, larceny and receiving stolen goods, entered by York county authorities.

He told the court that he was not guilty of four of the charges, but admitted the theft of an automobile and the larceny of $6.51 from the collection box of the First United Brethren church, Hanover.

HOSPITAL REPORT

Andrew Keiholtz, Emmitsburg, and Ervin J. Kopp, Gettysburg college, were admitted as patients to the Warner hospital. Edna Moose, Westminster, and Hazel Pennell, Littlestown, were discharged as patients.

Cites Law Covering Holiday Work Hours For Women

Harry D. Immel, chief of the bureau of inspection, Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry, in a statement today, reminded employers of the state that the overtime work for female employees on account of Christmas buying must be carefully watched.

The law, Immel explained, permits overtime work on three days of the same week in which a legal holiday occurs, but not more than twelve hours may be worked on any one of those three days, and not more than fifty-four hours worked in the week. This overtime, it is announced, can be worked only on three days after December 18, as the week including Christmas, by this computation, begins on December 19. At the same time, not more than fifty-four hours can be worked in the calendar week beginning December 16.

Employers of boys and girls not over 16 years of age are warned that such employees, under no circumstances, can be employed more than nine hours a day, or fifty-one hours a week, or after 8 o'clock in the evening. Every such employee must be provided with an employment certificate before being employed.

The bureau of inspection has instructed its inspectors to check up closely on this extra employment, and to see that violations are properly dealt with.

AIR MAIL IS FIRST TO GO

Post Office Employees Told To Rush All Air Mail Letters And Packages.

The appeal to "Mail Early" and "Shop Early" continues to be made.

"Shop Early" to relieve the congested situation of crowded stores, depleted stocks and tired clerks is a human appeal and is more beneficial to the shopper than to any one else.

"Mail Early" is a guarantee that the post office department will deliver your first class mail or parcels within good time, assuring prompt delivery. Late mailing may mean a delay in delivery until the day after Xmas.

An unusual condition prevails this year.

The first feature is contained in the announcement from Postmaster General Harry New, who decreed that overworked mail men will have a full holiday this Christmas and that no delivery of mail will be made next Tuesday.

Air Mail First

Even the calendar is adapted to the situation which will confront mailers of Yule packages and cards. Christmas falls on Tuesday, so that the next to the last day before Christmas is a Sunday, and consequently there will be no mail deliveries on that day.

Assistant Postmaster Irving W. Glover not long ago sent out definite instructions to all postmasters and postal employees that air mail must be given preferred and immediate attention at all points en route and by everyone handling it. He pointed out that the public has demonstrated its willingness to pay three cents additional for the average letter, in order to take advantage of the speed of the service, and the department's customers must be given what they have purchased—speed.

All of which means that on the Monday preceding Christmas, air mail letters, cards and packages will be given preferred attention, with the strong probability that late-mailed packages by ordinary postage will not be delivered until after Christmas.

Mother Of County Residents Expires

Mrs. Lydia Stremmel, wife of Emmanuel Stremmel, died at her home along the Carlisle pike Sunday evening at 7 o'clock of a complication of diseases at the age of 78 years.

She was a daughter of the late John and Elizabeth Bange and is survived by her husband and the following children: Mrs. Curtis Ruth, East Berlin; Mrs. John Kinneman, Abbotstown; Mrs. John McClellan, Harney; Mrs. Charles Elder, New Oxford; Jacob and Harvey Stremmel, Hanover. Thirty-one grandchildren, 12 great-grandchildren, two brothers, Levi Bange, Glenville, and Aaron Bange, Harrisburg; two sisters, Mrs. Kate Messenger, York, and Mrs. Wildasin, Hanover, also survive.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at the house with concluding services at Grace Reformed church with the Rev. Dr. M. J. Roth officiating. Interment in Mt. Olivet cemetery.

FARM WEATHER REPORT

For Eastern Pennsylvania: Partly cloudy and somewhat cloudy tonight. Wednesday, cloudy with rain or snow in north and possibly light rains in south portions.

What Price Marriage?

Belgrade, Dec. 18.—(AP)—One of the longest and most expensive wedding celebrations known to these parts has just ended in the village of Sotine, near Mitrovitz.

The principals in the celebration were Theresa Schwartz, village belle, 16, and Anton Seidel, son of a wealthy farmer, both of Swedish descent.

Festivities following the actual ceremony continued for nine days and nights, with 550 invited and 2,200 uninvited guests drinking, eating, dancing and singing without interruption. Six cows, 46 pigs, 16 calves, 600 chickens, 300 geese and 300 turkeys were slaughtered for the occasion and 20,000 quarts of beer, 10,000 quarts of wine and 200 quarts of plum whisky were consumed.

At the end of the orgy guests threw themselves exhausted into stacks of hay, sleeping for two entire days and nights. The weary but happy bride and bridegroom slipped away to spend their honeymoon in a neighboring province.

Flu Spreading In U S; Cases Are Few Here

Washington, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Public officials today estimated that 403,185 new cases of influenza had developed in 20 states and New York city last week basing their figure on actual reports of 80,637 cases in these states. Reports were not available from other states but public health officials said the outbreak seemed to be moving eastward along lines of traffic at an "expected" speed.

Health officials said the death rate seems to be increasing slightly. The rate however is not so high as could be expected, the report added. Neither is the rate comparable with the rate in 1918.

While the epidemic of influenza, prevalent in many sections of the country, seems to have missed Gettysburg and Adams county up to the present, many persons here are reported to be suffering from heavy colds, but physicians hope to bring their patients around to health without serious consequences with the advent of more seasonable weather. The rainy weather and dampness of the past few days have been conducive to contracting colds, physicians said. Lloyd C. Keefeauver, supervising principal of the Gettysburg public schools, today said there is no abnormal number of absentees among the school children. A number of cases of measles and chicken pox were reported to Mr. Keefeauver and two cases of typhoid fever, both of the sufferers, however, living in the country.

COLLEGE CONCERT HELD ON SUNDAY

Emmitsburg, Dec. 18.—The annual Christmas concert under the auspices of the Mt. St. Mary's college orchestra and Glee club, directed by Prof. William Sterbinsky, was given at St. Joseph's college auditorium Sunday afternoon before a large audience. Since the erection of the new and spacious auditorium these concerts, just before the Christmas recess, form one of the important activities of the college.

COLLEGE PLAY PLEASURES LARGE CROWD MONDAY

"Lady Windermere's Fan" Is Well Presented Before 500 Persons Here.

"Lady Windermere's Fan," Oscar Wilde's sparkling portrayal of life in "The Gay Nineties," was capably enacted so as to bring out the full measure of the scintillating epigrams and witticisms as well as its more serious content, by the Owl and Nightingale Dramatic club at the Eddie Plank memorial gymnasium, Monday evening. Five hundred persons were in attendance, and were ready to vouch for the statement that the production was one of the best ever directed by Dr. Richard A. Arms, the club director.

Leads Well Played

Miss Clara Baker and George Hoffman in the roles of "Lady and Lord Windermere," respectively, carried the burden of the story along with Miss Elizabeth Trostel as "Mrs. Erlynne." The domestic life of the "Windermere's" and their threatened separation because of the infidelity of the husband served as the background of the play. However, "Mrs. Erlynne," due to her connection with the family, was able to mend the marital difficulties.

Frivolity reached its heights in the characters of "The Duchess of Berwick" and "Lord Augustus Lorton," Miss Louise Ramer and Herbert Mahl. In the "Duchess" the audience was reminded that even in English society in 1890 gossiping was one of the favorite pastimes. "There is no fool like an old fool" might be applied to "Lord Augustus" in view of the anxiety and the trouble he experienced to become the husband of "Mrs. Erlynne."

Striking Epigrams

A few of the striking epigrams from this witty play are: "I can resist everything except temptation"; "Men become old but they never become good"; and "Wicked women bother one, good women bore one."

Other characters than those mentioned were: "Lord Darlington", Fred Goss; "Lady Agatha", Miss Jeanette Horner; "Mr. Dumby", William Mickey; "Lady Plymdale", Miss Ethel Clapsaddle; "Lady Stutfield", Miss Louella Snider; "Mr. Hopper", Roland Banes; "Mr. Graham", Willis Manges; "Rosalie", a maid, Miss Lyla Tobias; and "Parker", a butler, Jesse Skelton.

HOLD INQUESTS INTO TWO DEATHS

Inquests in two deaths caused by automobile accidents will be held tonight and Wednesday nights by Coroner L. U. Zech. A jury will sit this evening at 7:30 o'clock in the office of Justice of the Peace L. D. Sell, at Hanover to hear testimony in the recent accident in which Claude W. Weaver, of near McSherrystown, was fatally injured when he was struck by an automobile driven by John Waldersdorf.

On Wednesday night at the same hour Coroner Zech and a jury will hold an inquest in the office of Furnace B. Oleweiler, funeral director, at Red Lion, in the death of Nathan Herbert, of Red Lion, R. D. No. 2. The latter was almost instantly killed when he got out of an automobile and walked directly in the path of the one driven by J. C. Maguire, of York, which was coming from the opposite direction.

New Oxford Pastor Begins Duties Dec. 30

A communication from the Rev. Howard E. Sheely, Stoutsville, O., recently elected pastor of the New Oxford charge of the Reformed church, states that his resignation as pastor of Heidelberg Reformed church at Stoutsville will become effective Dec. 23, next, and his new work at New Oxford will begin Dec. 30.

He, with his family, will move to New Oxford during Christmas week. Two churches are contained in the New Oxford charge, one at New Oxford and the other at Abbotstown. The aggregate membership of the charge is about 500. The Rev. Mr. Sheely is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Sheely, of York.

LEGION PLANS TO LEASE ROOM

Committee Is Appointed To Investigate Feasibility And Report At Next Meeting.

A committee, which will investigate the feasibility of the Albert J. Lentz Legion post moving out of its present quarters in the First National bank building and renting rooms on the second floor of Harris Brothers' building, Baltimore street, was appointed at a regular meeting of the ex-service men's organization, Monday evening. The committee, comprising Howard Diehl, William Eckenrode and Harry Troxel, was instructed to give its report at a special meeting to be held Wednesday evening, December 26.

At present, the Legion is renting from the Forty and Eight, a side organization, which holds a lease on the rooms in the First National bank building. The lease does not expire until April, 1930. Most of the Legionnaires were reported as favorable to the proposition to rent the other quarters so that club rooms could be re-opened where the former service men could gather in the evenings for recreation and entertainment.

Commander John P. Butt, who presided at the well-attended meeting, appointed a committee, comprising Dorsey Robert, Ralph Stoner and Fred Haehnle, to take charge of the Legion's Christmas charities. The Legion annually distributes baskets of provisions and clothing among the families of deserving ex-service men in Gettysburg and Adams county.

Truck Held Until Car Gets Licenses

After Pennsylvania license plates were secured Monday for a truck, hauling provisions for A. and P. stores in Pennsylvania from the Baltimore warehouse, the machine, which was seized by highway patrolmen here, Sunday evening, was released. The truck was owned by J. C. Keene and operated by Howard Fink, both of Baltimore.

COUNTIAN HAS HAZARDOUS TRIP

The trials and troubles of traveling on a rainy day were related by C. L. Eicholtz, New Oxford.

After a business trip to Waynesboro Monday Mr. Eicholtz started on his way home. At Rouserville, he tried to cross the trolley tracks, but the right front tire became wedged in the siding. The tire blew out.

A trolley car approached. With the aid of the trolley crew and a few passengers, the car was extricated from the tracks and the damaged car repaired.

Again starting on his way homeward, Mr. Eicholtz encountered a dense fog on top of the mountains and sensing the hazardous conditions, returned to Waynesboro to spend the night, returning to his home today.

Rotarians Hear About Ginger Ale

Rotarians were told how Canada Dry ginger ale is manufactured through the medium of a moving picture and a few remarks, at their regular weekly meeting Monday night, in the Eagle hotel. The moving picture was shown through the courtesy of Charles M. Spangler, York, district agent for the company, and each member of the club was given a bottle of the ale furnished by the manufacturing company and the John C. Lower company, Gettysburg, of which Rotarian W. A. Miller is manager.

Lions Enjoy Turkey Dinner Monday Night

The Lions club contributed five dollars to the Red Cross, made a similar contribution to the Fire Company Kiddie party and collected a contribution from each member for a fund to be given to the Y. W. C. A. to assist the latter in their Christmas basket program. The Lions enjoyed a turkey dinner served at the Hotel Gettysburg. Each member was presented with an ash tray by Manager Henry M. Scharf.

STUDENT HURT IN AUTO SPILL

Ervin J. Kopp In Hospital Here Following Accident On Lincoln Highway.

Ervin J. Kopp, Red Lion, a freshman at Gettysburg college, suffered lacerations about the head when the automobile he was driving left the Lincoln Highway, east of here, and upset at midnight. Kopp, who was driving the car, owned by David Miller, of Stewartstown, is said to have fallen asleep at the wheel, losing control of the machine. Kopp was taken to the Warner hospital, where his injuries were dressed by Dr. M. S. Weaver. He was still a patient at the hospital today, but was expected to be discharged within a day or two.

Three other students, said to have been with Kopp, escaped injury.

The light roadster in which the four students were riding was badly damaged and had to be towed to the Plank and Bell garage.

Benefit Show At Strand Tonight

It was inadvertently announced in the display advertising for the Strand theatre that Monday was the last night to contribute foods for the Christmas charity baskets. The Times regrets this error.

"Rookies" will be the feature attraction tonight and Milton Sills in "Paradise" was the attraction Monday night. Patrons of tonight's performance are permitted to contribute foods and other Christmas articles to be used in the Christmas baskets to be given to less fortunate residents of Gettysburg and the county.

FATALITIES ON DECREASE

Ten Fewer Fatal Industrial Accidents In State During Nov. Than In Oct.

Ten fewer fatal industrial accidents were reported in Pennsylvania during November than the preceding month of October, figures released by the State Department of Labor and Industry disclosed today.

The November fatality toll was 159 and a month ago 169 lives were lost in accidents in industries in the state. The non-fatal accidents for these two months were: November, 12,763; October, 15,091. The decline of the non-fatal group was 15.4 per cent.

Decline Is Noted

Comparing these figures for November with those of November, 1927, a decline of 17.2 per cent is shown in the total of fatal accidents, there being 33 fewer fatalities. In the non-fatal group the decline is 2.5 per cent, the total being 324 below last November. The department attributes the large reduction in the fatal accident total to the fact that the November 1927 figures include 26 deaths resulting from the Pittsburgh gas explosion of November 14, 1927.

Compilations for the first eleven months of 1928, however, show an increase of 32 fatal accidents above the same period of last year. Thus far this year, 1,935 deaths have been recorded as compared with 1,903 last year. The non-fatal accident figure fell 7,648 under 1927. The eleven months' figure of this year is 139,423 as against 147,071 for 1927.

Substantial Reduction Excluding the deaths resulting from the Mather mine disaster last May, a substantial reduction is shown in the totals of all groups, however, this year. Transportation and public utilities fatalities for the first eleven months of 1928 declined by 59 below the same period of 1927. Industrial accidents dropped by 48 but an increase of 139 is seen in the coal mining group. The non-fatal accidents are considerably lower in all groups.

Lodge Plays Host To Many Visitors

ELWOOD JACOBS ELECTROCUTED AT BITTINGERS

24-Year-Old Hampton Man, Father Of Three Children Dies In Hanover Hospital.

Elwood Jacobs, 24, Hampton, died at the Hanover General hospital at 3 o'clock, Monday afternoon, an hour after he had received the full charge of a 440-volt electric line at the Bethlehem mines, at Bittingers.

Jacobs, according to reports, was standing on a wet platform while attaching the electric power line to a drilling machine. In some manner, he came into contact with an exposed portion of a socket, and received the full charge through his body.

Was Working Alone

Jacobs, who was employed at the stone quarry as a well driller, was alone at the time of the accident, and the exact manner in which he came to his death is unknown. He was attempting to start the driller at about 2 o'clock, and is thought to have touched the uninsulated portion of the electric socket, falling onto the platform with the wire still in contact with his body. A. E. Frock, a foreman at the Bethlehem quarries, discovered Jacobs lying on the platform several minutes later, and pulled him away from the wire which was sending the fatal current through his body, being slightly shocked himself in so doing.

Coroner Investigates

The Hanover ambulance was summoned, and the injured man was taken to the hospital. He was admitted to the hospital at 2:30 o'clock, where it was found that he was still showing a feeble pulse. Artificial respiration was resorted to, but at the end of about a half hour's work Jacobs was pronounced dead.

Coroner L. U. Zech was called, and after an investigation decided that the man's death was accidental, and that an inquest would not be necessary. It is thought that a weak heart was a contributory cause of death.

Funeral Friday

Jacobs, who was well-liked in Hampton, where he was born and reared, had worked at the Bethlehem mines two or three years.

He is survived by his widow and three children, Irene, Ledata and Lloyd. Funeral services Friday morning at 9 o'clock at the home, the Rev. J. Harold Little, pastor of the Lutheran church, officiating. Interment at Hampton.

Coolidge Thinks Kellogg's Treaty Bill Will Pass

Washington, Dec. 18.—(AP)—President Coolidge is of the opinion that the Kellogg treaty to outlaw war has sufficient support for its ratification without and reservations or accompanying resolutions.

The treaty was well started on its way to the senate today from the Foreign Relations committee to compete with the Cruiser Construction bill for prior consideration of the floor.

Bent on rushing the treaty to the senate before it can take up the Naval bills, Chairman Borah of the Foreign Relations committee began a poll of the committee today on the question of approval when only a few members had turned up for the brief session.

FIREMEN WIN OPENER 37-34

"Hen" Bream Stars For Fire Eaters And Cages Eight 2-Pointers In Opening Tilt.

The Gettysburg firemen's basketball team opened its season with a thrilling victory over the Rosewood club, of Harrisburg, Monday night in the Hotel Gettysburg annex. The final count was 37-34.

Henry Bream was the shining light of the evening, caging nine field goals. Peduzzi, his running mate, was far from his former self and struck down the total with four field goals and a free throw.

Buehler tallied with three field goals and Bender registered a field goal.

For the visitors Kerns registered five field goals and tossed two free points. McCarvel registered four goals and one free basket while Anderson tallied three goals. Sheezy counted for a field goal in each half.

The firemen, despite their victory, have not reached even near peak shape. They have had few practice sessions and their attack was easily solved by the visitors, although the speed of the local dribblers was too much for the Harrisburg aggregation.

Hubisak was the referee.

The line-up:
Firemen Position Rosewood
Bream forward..... Kerns
Peduzzi forward..... McCarvel
Bender center..... Ross
Miller guard..... Dayhoff
Buehler guard..... Sheezy
Substitutions: Anderson for Dayhoff.

Following the lead of the Gettysburg fire company, the Biglerville fire company has organized a basketball team, which will play its first game at the Biglerville auditorium, Friday evening, December 28, with a quintet from Reed's Athletic association, Gettysburg. D. A. Washington, chief of the Biglerville company, sponsored the team.

Under the leadership of Earl Carey, the team has been practicing strenuously for its opening contest, and is expected to have a formidable quintet this season. On the squad are Harold Slaybaugh, Ivan Taylor, Curtis Bucher, Lester Bucher, Fred Trimmer, George Weaver, Bion Wright, Charles Ammons, Ray Foth and Clair Van Dyke.

G. W. Deardorff is manager of the team, and is looking over engagements for the Biglerville "smoke eaters."

KIDDIES GIVEN XMAS GIFTS BY BUSINESS GIRLS

Twenty-one persons, including members of the Business and Professional Girls' club of the Y. W. C. A. and a number of local businessmen, went to the Mont Alto sanatorium, Sunday, with gifts for the 31 children there who had written to Santa Claus. The presents will be distributed among the children Christmas morning.

Authorities at the sanatorium were loud in their praise of the various organizations and individuals here who helped make the Christmas gifts possible. The local visitors were taken on a tour of inspection through the sanatorium, and distributed candy, oranges and nuts among the children.

Miss Edna Eicholtz was chairman of the committee in charge of securing the presents, and today she publicly thanked individuals and organizations who made the gifts possible.

Jury Acquits Husband Slayer

(By Pacific & Atlantic)

After deliberating five hours a jury in Queens county, N. Y., court found Mrs. Frances Kirkwood not guilty of charge that she had knifed to death her husband, Dr. Glenn Kirkwood. Overcome by the verdict, she was assisted from courtroom by matrons. She's shown in court with Hanna Meyers (right), matron, before the verdict.

"Santa" Dies Amid Toys In Blizzard

Prescott, Ariz., Dec. 18.—(AP)—The Santa Claus who annually visited Wagoner, an isolated town thirty miles from here, was killed when his gift-laden automobile plunged into a mountain ravine during a blinding snowstorm.

The gift bearer died among his wrecked toys, but with his last breath he murmured to the rescue party:

"Boys, for God's sake, see that those kiddies are happy."

Tom Goodwin, wealthy cattleman, loaded his automobile with Christmas toys Saturday and with Miss Pearl Johnson and Reg Thomas started for Wagoner.

Disaster overtook the party in a terrific snowstorm. Thomas and Miss Johnson were found, suffering from exposure. In a ravine 100 feet below the road, Goodwin lay dying beside his wrecked car.

AFGHAN KING FLEES TO FORT

New Delhi, India, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Reports from the frontier say King Amanullah, of Afghanistan, and Queen Soraiya have taken refuge in a fort, the army having turned against them.

The rebels who have been resisting to reforms of King Amanullah have attacked Kabul. There was serious fighting in the capital today, and considerable anxiety prevailed regarding the safety of foreigners.

Communications have ceased except for the wireless, which stated the legations were safe.

The situation in Afghanistan changed for the worse in the last two days, and fighting between the government and the rebels was reported today from Jalalabad, near the Indian border, as well as Kabul.

The rebels captured two small forts and munitions near the capital.

While reports of disturbances in the remote sections of Afghanistan have been received recently, today's advices were the first indicating that the disaffection had spread to Kabul, a city of about 100,000.

The trouble at Kabul was attributed to the King's drastic westernization reforms and to Queen Soraiya's desire to abolish purdah, or the seclusion of women.

Improvement Of King Continues

London, Dec. 18.—(AP)—It was officially stated at 3 o'clock this afternoon that the improvement noted in King George's condition in this morning's bulletin was continued.

The long and patient struggle to save the life of King George and restore him to health witnessed another of its tremulous fluctuations in the last 24 hours but the latest advices from the sick room again noted an upward trend.

The morning bulletin of the doctors said that both the king's general condition and the condition around the affected lung area had improved overnight, if only slightly.

News From Neighboring Counties

DEATH CLAIMS TWO

Chambersburg.—William M. Fleagle, aged 55 years, died December 10 at the Pittsburgh hospital of complications, following an operation for appendicitis. Mr. Fleagle was born in Franklin county, July 5, 1873. Since residing in the northeastern part of the state, he was employed as fireman at the Wyoming Shovel Works.

He is survived by one daughter, Ruth, of Wyoming, Pa., where she is employed as a teacher, also two brothers, Jesse M., of Altoona; Charles E., of Horse Valley; two sisters, Mrs. W. F. French, of Amerson Valley and Salome Hockenberry, of Doylestown.

Dr. William B. Morrison, 62 years old, died suddenly at his home in Hagerstown, shortly before 11 o'clock Sunday night. Death was due to a heart attack, one of several Doctor Morrison has suffered in the last year. The physician's death occurred just a short time after he and Dr. O. H. W. Ragan had returned from a meeting and banquet of the Washington County Medical association. Doctor Morrison was in the best of spirits Sunday and did not complain of feeling ill.

KNEE IS INJURED

Waynesboro.—Ray Funk, of Good, is suffering from a sore right knee as the result of a piece of steel, striking it Sunday night, while working at his home. Funk was hitting a chisel with a hammer, when a part of the chisel broke and penetrated his knee. Funk received treatment at the office of a local physician, who removed the steel from the injured man's knee.

$12,300,000 TO ADVERTISE FAGS

New York, Dec. 18.—One of the largest newspaper advertising appropriations ever devoted to a single product will be spent by the American Tobacco Company in 1929 to promote the sale of Lucky Strike cigarettes. George W. Hill, president of the company, announced today that next year's direct advertising budget for its principal brand of cigarettes will total $12,300,000. This sum does not include sales or trade expenses.

More than half of this entire appropriation will be allotted to newspapers. It will include practically every daily in the United States. The newspaper appropriation will be more than double the next largest allotment, which is for outdoor advertising, and more than 10 times as great as the amount that will be spent for radio broadcasting in which the company is a pioneer.

The $12,300,000 appropriation will include:
Daily Newspapers $ 6,500,000
Magazines 1,200,000
Billboards 3,000,000
Store Helps 1,000,000
Radio 600,000

"MY MAN," starring Fannie Brice, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

In a little apartment in the Bronx Fanny Brice is bringing up her orphaned brother, Phil, and her sister, Audrey. Fanny, six years older than her sister, has had to work to keep the wolf from the door ever since she can remember, and her main desire is to save the attractive, but selfish, Audrey from the husky life she, herself, knows. Audrey is a stenographer, but it is still Fanny who really supports the family. On her way to work Fanny stops to watch a man demonstrating a muscle builder.

CHAPTER II—Continued

The young man had stopped his precarious teetering and pointed to the sign that reposed on an easel at his left hand. He waited, gesticulating, until he felt that all his audience had become fully cognizant of the words. Then he struck a pose that Hercules might have envied. His leg muscles bulged, his chest swelled to huge proportions. He flexed his arms and slowly the muscles began to ripple and then to bulge like balloons being inflated.

Fanny watched in awe.

hibition of strength. And she was not alone in her evident approval of the handsome young man. Other girls were standing, their noses pressed against the window pane, gazing with marked interest, giggling and nudging each other. But Fanny saw none of them. She saw, only, an heroic figure with a sun-browned skin, very white teeth, and muscles that moved like little alive things beneath the flesh. She sighed luxuriously, like a school-girl over her first love.

Lost in admiration for the man, Fanny did not notice that the people were beginning to stare curiously at her. Even the attention of the gum-chewing girls beside her was drawn from the original attraction and focused on the shabby coat, the dark, shapeless hat, the enraptured face.

Suddenly one of the girls laughed, a mocking, lifting laugh. "Looka that, will ya!" She nudged her friend and nodded toward Fanny. "Oh, Gawd! Ain't love grand!"

Hard little giggles escaped the girls' lips. Fanny turned quickly, suddenly conscious of her surroundings. Her face was becoming red and warm, and she knew that she was blushing furiously, and the more she realized the fact, the redder she became, until, with a little cry of mortification, she turned and fled, elbowing her way through the crowd. She ran up the elevated steps as though pursued, fumbling in her bag for a five cent piece. She dropped a coin in the slot and tried to push through the barriers. They stuck. "I can't get through? Is it broken?" she called to the guard. Behind her others waited, or hurried past through other gates.

"Did you put your nickel in?" the man demanded.

"Why, certainly," Fannie retorted. "I got it out of my bag coming up the steps—I just dropped it—"

The man raised the top of a little box and took out a penny and held it up. "You put that in," he told Fannie.

"Oh, I made a mistake," Fannie said. "Why, I was sure I put a nickel in—" She blushed harder than ever and finally produced a nickel, feeling just as small as the coin the man returned to her.

In the workshop of Thorne, Incorporated, announced as Theatrical Costumers on the sign on the door, some fifteen girls bent over sewing machines stitching, stitching, stitching on bright-colored garments of varied designs. Some sat by windows in the rear of the room, sewing on spangles and sequins, their fingers flying over the soft, filmy materials. Some fitted sheer, delicate dresses onto mannequins, their mouths full of pins, pinching, tucking, draping.

Among them Fanny moved, sewing, stitching, fitting, putting the finishing touches on a fluffy pink ballet dress which she compared, now and again, with a worn model. Scraps of conversation broke the monotony from time to time, and were quickly hushed by the forewoman, who walked back and forth about the room, supervising, helping, answering questions, and keeping the work moving swiftly.

In the outer office, a great, square room lined about with glass cases harboring costumes of every description, stood Abraham Thorne, better known to the profession as Abe. A round, bulbous figure of a man, Thorne, with closely cropped black hair, heavily-lidded, dark eyes and a heavy, red mouth. With him was a tall, fair man with drooping shoulders and drooping mustache, Joe Lazarus, art director for Bronson Waldo, the theatrical producer, whose name in the realm of musical comedy was the same as that of Edison in the world of science.

The two men were inspecting a living mannequin who paraded before them, clad in a scanty costume of the sheerest black net and silver mesh. Thorne rubbed his hands and glanced from the model to Lazarus, and then back to the model again. Lazarus pulled at the ends of his mustache and frowned.

"That costume's terrible, Abe." He turned to the manufacturer, shaking his head. "You haven't followed my sketches. If Waldo ever saw that he'd throw us both out. Now look here." He went over to the model and turned the girl about. "This entire side is supposed to be black. The silver's got to cut across the body like a streak of lightning. Don't you get the idea? This is a Storm Ballet, and this is the night stuff, and these costumes are the lightning ones. From the way it looks now, you'd think lightning'd struck it."

"Nu, nu, Mr. Lazarus," Thorne calmed the artist, flapping his fat, pudgy hands on the air. "You don't like it—I don't like it so good myself. I cut the design myself. I don't know why it is them girls shouldn't make it like I tell them. Sure it's gotta be changed. I could see that myself."

"Well, what I want is the silver cutting zig-zag here—inset in the net," Thorne explained, pointing across the body of the dress.

"Yes, yes, sure, I know," Thorne nodded.

"And this streak's got to cut from the neck and start around the body, see?"

"Yes, sure. I can fix that."

"Everything's got to follow around, so when the girls turn it's going to make a big flash."

"Sure, I know. I tell you what we do, Mr. Lazarus. We go back and see Mrs. Paul now. You could explain her what she should do yourself."

"All right," Lazarus agreed.

"But look here, Abe, I've got to have these costumes ready—every one of them—by the middle of the month. We're going to open the eighteenth, and I'm sending the girls to be fitted every day, now."

"Mr. Lazarus, when I promise you, I promise you, and I promise you you should have everything set by April twelve, and you get 'em by April twelve. You ain't gotta worry. I should do all the worrying. Come out here." He beckoned the art director and the model to follow him.

The three started towards the closed door that led into the workroom in the rear. As they approached the entrance Thorne stopped, listening intently. A strange sound—strange for the workroom, at least, caught his ears. He looked at Lazarus, and Lazarus, too, was listening. Thorne frowned, his lower lip protruding. He opened the door quietly, and then straightened up, his head thrown back, his mouth hanging open in surprise.

In the big workroom the girls were sitting about at their various tables and machines, lunches spread out in their laps. But they were not eating. Instead, they were shrieking with laughter.

"Ol, gevalt!" Thorne moaned, staring pop-eyed.

Mr. Scott is a native of Gettysburg, son of ex-Sheriff John Scott, and is a teacher in the institution at which his wife was educated. The ceremony was performed in the sign language of the institution.)

Public Schools.—The examination of the Public Schools of this place is now in progress. The schools will close from Monday next until Jan. 2.

The committee of the first corps of the Army of the Potomac, charged with raising funds for a monument in memory of Gen. Reynolds, have made a final report. The equestrian statue in the National Cemetery at this place cost $10,000 and the pedestal $3,648. There was a surplus of $1,736, which was paid for a portrait of the deceased, which has been presented to the United States Military Academy at West Point.

Accident.—Last Friday afternoon a young daughter of Elias Sebold, of this place, made a narrow escape from death. She was crossing the bridge over Stevens run on Carlisle street. A horseman riding rapidly after a drove of mules, not noticing the girl, rode over her. She was severely but not dangerously injured. Dr. Diehl was called in, and she is improving, although suffering severe pain.

Fairfield Items.—Mr. John Loch, well and favorably known in this community, died at Mt. Hope, near Baltimore, on the 5th inst. His body was taken to Charlestown, West Virginia, for burial.

An effort is being made to start a Literary Society in this place. Mr. Joseph Peters lost two children the past week by diphtheria, aged respectively 2 and 6 years. Mr. John Musselman of D. also lost two by the same disease.

The dedication of the new Reformed church will take place on Sunday, Dec. 29, at 10 a. m. The dedicatory services will begin on Friday, the 27th and continue until Sunday evening. Rev. AT CHRISTMAS TIME

At Christmas time Old Age gets out

And Youth comes in to rule the place.

Perhaps I've turned a trifle stout

And care has deeply lined my face,

But this old heart can beat with joy

And I can romp with any boy.

Hang up the holly wreath and light

The candles on the Christmas tree,

And Old Man Gravity takes flight,

Gay youth comes romping back to me.

Hang up a sprig of mistletoe,

And I'll kiss every girl I know!

Who says there is no thrill in ties

And slippers and a shirt or two?

These weather-beaten, fading eyes

Will dance with joy such things to view.

Just like a boy I rush to see

What Santa Claus has brought for me.

Let sour old cynics sneer and say

That: "Christmas is for children small."

When comes that glad and glorious day,

Age does not hinder me at all.

I'm just a kid at Christmas time

When carols sound and church bells chime.

shouted poetical Uncle Lucky in answer to the rapturously tip, tip, tip of his bunny nephew's paw on the panel of the door.

"Well, I'm undecided what to do today," yawned the old gentleman rabbit after a minute or three.

"I've the rheumatiz something dreadful in my little hind toe, the left hind toe, the one that always aches, you know. Suppose we have a game of checkers!"

"All right," agreed the obliging little bunny, although he did want to go for a ride in the Sledmobile. However, he smiled and sat down at the small table which his old Uncle drew over. By and by, after a game or three, the old gentleman rabbit grew drowsy. And would you believe it? before you could say he was fast asleep in his big easy chair. So softly tip-toeing out of the sitting room, the little rabbit peeped into the kitchen.

"Winky, winky, blinkety blink! I'll soon have a pretty dream I think!"

"I believe I'll hop over to see dear Uncle Lucky," thought the little rabbit as the Yellow Dog Tramp, who had just eaten a good breakfast at the little white house in the dear Old Bramble Patch, as I mentioned in the last story, trotted off down the road. "Yes, I'll hop over to see my dearest Uncle," and off went the little bunny, clip-pety clip, lip-pety lip, with never a stumble and nary a slip, over the Sunny Meadow which was now covered with snow as smooth and white as Lady Love's best table cloth.

All of a sudden just a little way ahead, the bunny boy thought he saw Danny Fox peeping from behind a stump. But he never waited to find out for sure. No, indeed. He just hopped along faster than ever and pretty soon he tapped on the door of the old gentleman rabbit's red shingled house on the corner of Lettuce Avenue and Carrot Street.

"Come in! Come in! Don't slam the door," Nor tramp in snow upon the floor. Wipe your feet upon the mat And shake the snowflakes from your hat."

shouted poetical Uncle Lucky in answer to the rapturously tip, tip, tip of his bunny nephew's paw on the panel of the door.

"Well, I'm undecided what to do today," yawned the old gentleman rabbit after a minute or three.

"I've the rheumatiz something dreadful in my little hind toe, the left hind toe, the one that always aches, you know. Suppose we have a game of checkers!"

"All right," agreed the obliging little bunny, although he did want to go for a ride in the Sledmobile. However, he smiled and sat down at the small table which his old Uncle drew over. By and by, after a game or three, the old gentleman rabbit grew drowsy. And would you believe it? before you could say

"Winky, winky, blinkety blink! I'll soon have a pretty dream I think!"

he was fast asleep in his big easy chair. So softly tip-toeing out of the sitting room, the little rabbit peeped into the kitchen.

Washington Highlights

By Kirke L. Simpson
Washington.—When the Pan-American conference on arbitration and conciliation opened, it looked as though Secretary Kellogg's 1928 model bilateral arbitration pact would guide the multilateral treaty proposals made by himself and former Secretary Hughes, representing the United States.

Naturally enough, the secretary feels that the general arbitration treaty the United States is signing bilaterally with most of the world about fills the bill. Mr. Hughes, however, is credited with decided views that the Kellogg model, of which the Franco-American pact was the pilot, could be improved in some respects.

Two Peace Court Plans
The point involved is the form of arbitration tribunal to which disputes falling within the treaty would be referred for adjudication. The standard Kellogg arbitration treaty, like its Root predecessor, provides for such reference to the permanent court at the Hague, or failing that, to some other "competent tribunal" selected by the parties in each specific case. A "special agreement" setting up such a tribunal, defining its powers and propounding the specific questions at issue, all subject to advice and consent of the senate, would be required.

Mr. Hughes represents a school of international peace thought which doubts the wisdom of procedure, possibly leaving selection of the judges to the moment of the heat of controversy. Experience with such procedure has not been entirely happy for the United States.

As a counter plan, it was urged that any Pan-American dispute go to judges selected by the disputing parties from a permanent panel of international jurists whose qualifications and disinterested motives were unassailable before the world. Qualified men will accept service on a permanent panel where they would decline to sit in a specific controversy, it is asserted.

Senate's Say

Possibly Secretary Kellogg himself sees the force of this argument in the abstract. He was faced, however, with highly practical questions regarding the senate's reception of whatever treaty might result from the new Pan-American conference.

Obviously, the Franco-American arbitration pact leans over backward to include specific mention of the senate's advice and consent prerogatives. That is an aftermath of the League of Nations fight which confronts all secretaries of state. French political necessities in that same treaty were satisfied with reference to the "constitutional laws of France." The senate already is committed by ratification of the Franco-

American pact to the Kellogg form. And as a former senator, perhaps Mr. Kellogg feels in dealing with the senate that a bird in hand's worth two in the bush.

Where Many Missed Death as Drawbridge Topped

(By Pacific & Atlantic)
Divers and derrick boats were put to work yesterday to clear the Hackensack river channel at Jersey City of the wreck of part of the $1,500,000 Lincoln highway bridge which collapsed. Weakening of the bridge supports by dredging operations was blamed for the crash of drawbridge section.

A Yankee Abroad

By De Witt Mackenzie

London.—Another Yankee when we were about to move to another place we asked her if she would come with us. To our surprise she countered with the query of whether we were going to rent another furnished place or whether we were to install our own furniture. We replied that we were taking a furnished place. The old cook shook her head.

"I can't go with you, then," she said. "When you get your own furniture I shall be glad to come with you again. You see, it's this way with me:

"I can't take any interest in rented furniture. If the furniture belongs to my master and mistress then I feel as though it were really mine. I like to polish it and see it looking nice. I suppose I am queer, but that's the way I feel about it."

She was a bit of an artist, that old girl. I respected her for her sentiment.

What price that sort of servant in the United States.

Cured His Rupture

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope or cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation if you write to me. Eugene M. Pallen, Carpenter 16,140, Marcellus Avenue, Manassas, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of the rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

wait for jobs to turn up.

Along the timber piling of the waterfront, a vendor of roasted chestnuts and a uniformed chauffeur are spectators as a freighter is laden with a cargo for Cuba and the West Indies. Stevedores trundle boxes of dry goods and sacks of cement into the bowels of the vessel through a dozen apertures on the side that abuts the pier. On the other side an indolent crew is passing barrels of flour from the interior of a lighter to its roof, where a crane hoists them over the deck of the ship and into the dark hold.

Coffee For Two

Under the bow of the freighter a workman on a marine welding barge tinkers at some inapparent chore with blow torches and a hand-manipulated forge. It still lacks an hour of noon, but he lays aside his tools, dives into his kit for a coffee pot, and climbs onto the pier to fill it with water from a faucet.

Returning, he puts the pot on the coals of the forge, and turns the handle busily for a dozen minutes, until the water is brought to a boil. Then he goes into his kit again and emerges with a can of coffee and a teaspoon. He ladles coffee generously into the boiling pot and stirs for ten minutes, finally he adjudges the coffee done.

Into the kit again for a cup—two cups; and a pair of sandwiches wrapped in newspaper. He looks up at his scant gallery and invites a hot dog man to share the coffee in his brimming pot. The hot dog man reaches into his own bin for a bun and a wiener, splashes them with mustard, and hops down onto the barge. They stand there as each drinks a cup of the black beverage.

Presently the hot dog man clambers ashore again and is off with his cart. The welder rinses the cups in the roily harbor water and puts them away. Then he empties out the unquaffed coffee—two thirds of a potful.

"It seems," remarks the chauffeur audibly, "a shame to waste it."

"Yes," the mechanic answers sociably, "but I always make a whole pot. Somebody generally drops in."

If there's anything you want, you can get it at very small cost through a Classified Advertisement in The Gettysburg Times. Just phone Miss Freighner or Miss Summel at The Times office.
